Who are UArctic members?

UArctic members are universities, colleges, research institutes, and other organizations committed to higher education, research, and outreach in and about the Arctic. Together, they form a diverse international network working to strengthen knowledge, capacity, and collaboration across the Circumpolar North and beyond.

How do members participate?

UArctic members engage actively in the network by:

- Connecting with Arctic researchers, educators, and institutions worldwide
- Participating in Thematic Networks and Institutes
- Joining north2north mobility program
- Sharing news, events, and research through UArctic channels
- Taking part in UArctic governance and decision-making
- Increasing the visibility and impact of their Arctic expertise
- Organizations and institutions can apply for UArctic membership through an annual application process. New members are elected through a vote during the UArctic Assembly, the annual members' meeting.
- The application is submitted online and includes key information about the institution, designated contact persons, and a letter of intent.
