Quick Facts

- Departmental Exchange students are admitted to a specific department
- UW quarter system → 10 weeks per quarter
- Full time course enrollment → minimum 12 credits (undergrad), 10 credits (grad); maximum 18 credits (typically 3-4 courses)
- Class formats include lecture and discussion, in-class presentations and case studies

Departmental exchange students will work with their departmental exchange coordinator at UW to register for classes. Students are responsible for ensuring that the credits they receive will transfer back to their home institution.

Visiting graduate students should submit a secondary application through the graduate school for the department to which they have been nominated. Once admitted, students will be expected to take courses largely within the department to which they applied.
